

This webinar will:

- Describe the current breast cancer burden in Minnesota American Indian/Alaska Native communities.
- Discuss the unique barriers AI/AN women face to prevention and detection, treatment and survivorship.
- Identify cultural characteristics that influence screening.
- Share personal perspective as a provider and a breast cancer survivor.
- Identify solutions that are culturally appropriate to increase screening.

Featured speaker:

Chris Davis NP, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa

Christine Davis is an enrolled member of the Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa and lives in Northern Minnesota. She has worked for her community's Health Division since 1994 in varied nursing roles. In 2015, she became a Family Nurse Practitioner and currently serves as the Medical Clinic Coordinator in addition to her provider responsibilities. Her passion for cancer care started many years before her own personal experience with breast cancer. She has experienced most areas of cancer care from a patient care perspective and as a patient herself. Her passion to assist her community in their journey motivates her to share her story and help educate the need for improved cancer screening in her community.

A representative from the American Indian Cancer Foundation will also participate in this webinar.
